

Peter Docker: Bio

Speaker | Teacher | Igniter

Peter gets up every day inspired to enable people to be extraordinary so that they can do extraordinary things. Extraordinary in the areas that really matter to them, areas that genuinely inspire them.

“What fires me up everyday is to see people achieving incredible things by being their true selves. Everyone has extraordinary talents and, when these are given space to breathe, combined with a clear sense of higher purpose, remarkable performance has a tendency to flow. Put simply, it’s about reconnecting to what it is to be human.”

Peter believes that when similarly inspired people come together in organisations, remarkable things can happen. Great performance is achieved by connecting people to a higher, common purpose – a ‘Why’. This leads to places to work in which people feel more fulfilled, there is a high level of discretionary effort, innovation and empowerment thrives – and sustainable results follow.

Peter is committed to helping shift the world of work to be a place where the vast majority of people go home fulfilled, energised and inspired by the work they do. Passionate about enabling people to be extraordinary and inspired by the theory of The Golden Circle, Peter has collaborated with Simon Sinek for over five years and has the role of Igniter and Implementation Specialist on the Start With Why team [startwithwhy.com].

Peter’s commercial and industry experience has been at the most senior levels in sectors including oil & gas, construction, mining, pharmaceuticals, banking, television, film, media, manufacturing and services – across 80 countries. His career has spanned professional pilot; leading an aviation training and standards organisation; teaching post-graduates at an international college; and running a multi-billion pound procurement project. A former Royal Air Force senior officer, he has been a Force Commander during combat flying operations and has seen service across the world. He is a seasoned crisis manager, a former international negotiator for the UK Government, and executive coach. Peter is now dedicated to continuing to learn and share insights into how humans operate, communicate and relate.
